#FARMLANDS Official Site: <https://goo.gl/PKkfAh> Thank you so much for watching this series from South Africa. If you'd like to support trips like this and he...South Africa's government is finally responding to popular pressure to redistribute its land, decades after the end of apartheid. Land which is still overwhelmingly owned by white people. On this rainy day, protesters wearing "LAND or DEATH" T-shirts sang protest songs seeking restitution for apartheid-era profits from a major South African bank. The Equality Court has ruled that the Black First Land First slogan, 'Land or Death', constitutes hate speech. The South African Human Rights Commission (SAHRC) took the matter to the Equality Court for a final ruling, acting on behalf of complainant Lucy Strydom.
